"If voting changed anything, they'd make it illegal" - Emma Goldman

DON'T VOTE, TAKE TO THE STREETS

May sees another round of local elections - an opportunity to vote for people who will supposedly carry out our wishes. But the reality is very different. The only way politicians respond to our demands is when we are on the streets, screaming loudly, forcing them to hear us.

Voting is not an act of political freedom. It is an act of political conformity. Those who refuse to vote are not expressing silence. They are screaming in the politician's ear: 'you do not represent me. I do not believe you'. Many people are deeply alienated by the political establishment. In the 32 London boroughs less than 40% of us took part in the last local elections. But it is not just a question of getting the 'right' politicians, politicians that listen, are well-meaning or have better policies. Even if everyone voted, 'our' politicians would not do what we need them to do. No matter which lot get elected, no matter what they say before the elections, they always end up betraying the working class. They sell off our treasures (municipal buildings, council estates, playing fields, parks, swimming pools, youth centres, etc) to parasite developers and landlords, they privatise and cut our services and raise council-tax to unaffordable levels. They even undertake a targeted policy of 'managed decline' and social cleansing in our communities.

That mark on the ballot paper means 'yes'; it is us agreeing to the electoral process by way of participating. No wonder all those who stand for election agree you should vote - it gives them credibility. Sadiq Khan won the election for London Mayor on the basis that Londoners had had enough of gentrification, social cleansing and the sell-off of public housing. But his new London plan is just more of the same- 'partnerships' with private developers- continuing to hand London on a plate to those whose main aim is profit.

The expression "don't vote, it only encourages them", gives an idea of why anarchists are against participating in elections. Voting just gives politicians our backing as they bring in policies most Londoners are against. They cannot help but do this as they are operating within a capitalist system; power lies outside Parliament in the hands of banks and big business. Don't give them an excuse to say that 'we voted for this'. It's on the streets and in grass roots campaigns that the true voice of Londoners will be heard. Not via the ballot box.

Vote for Nobody

THE ALTERNATIVES

We say "vote for nobody" because we don't think 59 councillors in Haringey should speak for 250,000 local people. Nor do we think 650 MPs should speak for 60 million people in the UK.

But "vote for nobody" doesn't mean "do nothing". It doesn't mean just moaning. Or thinking only of yourself.

To change the present system that puts profit before people and the rich before the poor we have to work out new ways of running our lives, environment and economy. Turn the TV off and start to make a difference. But how?

Here are some examples. There is Haringey Federation of Residents' Associations. If every street/estate had its own residents' group, with everyone playing a part, we would make the decisions that affect how and where we live. In fact, there are already dozens of such groups in Haringey doing just this. Haringey Friends of Parks Forum is doing the same thing for our local parks. Both need more of us involved.

Housing co-ops are where people collectively own their own homes or in some cases whole estates. Those who live in the homes decide how they are run. Workers co-ops are where workers get together to run a business without a boss –and everybody gets the same money no matter if they do the accounts or the cleaning.

Then there are groups fighting for different rights for local people. Out Tottenham want the people of Tottenham to decide how our area should look and be developed. Wards Corner Community Coalition is doing the same around Seven Sisters. Similar campaigns exist all over Haringey.

Militant trades unions, run by workers, get better wages and conditions for themselves and offer a lead to others to do likewise. People with kids are setting up play groups. In Haringey Housing Action Group people support each other to get decent housing by using direct action. Tottenham Rights are fighting racism and support those attacked by the state like Mark Duggan. These, and many more, are examples of people organising, fighting back and changing things for the better - for all of us.

So, it's not what box you put a cross in on May 3rd that counts. It's about what we (and not politicians) do for the rest of the year that matters. But, if we don't start organising ourselves, then politicians will continue to treat us like children who should be seen but not heard.

It did get noticed when there were 120,000 spoilt papers in the Police and Crime Commissioners (PCC) elections in 2010.

Add your own box to the list of candidates and label it "None of the above" or "Honest politician". A spoilt ballot is an alternative to the protest vote of choosing a candidate you're sure won't get in, which reduces the percentage vote for the winner.

It's only one small act of dissent, but why stop there?

SPOILER NO

I have no faith in the political system - this so called representative democracy. So I will not be voting in these elections. People tell me if I don't vote I have no right to criticise decisions politicians make. I am told that not voting is apathetic. But regardless of whether I vote or not, the real apathy comes from doing nothing in between elections. If you really want to make a difference then get out there and be involved.

Why not spoil your vote to show you're unhappy with the way things are? Why, because it is a total waste of time, it achieves nothing. Spoiled votes are counted and added to the official figures but how and why they were spoiled is not registered. I hate a political system that is self-serving, unjust and corrupt. The very act of turning up just to spoil my ballot shows support for a system I cannot stand. Not voting doesn't mean I am apathetic as many claim. I have joined with others locally to fight the injustices in our community, so that together we can make a difference.

WHO WE ARE

In 1991, Haringey Solidarity Group (HSG) emerged from the Anti-Poll Tax campaign. We wanted to create a long-term, vibrant, non-hierarchical group, unlike political parties where ambitions and posturing displace real politics.

We believe in ridding ourselves of the current system which places profit and power before people's needs. This involves getting organised, fighting back and collectively taking those decisions which affect our daily lives.

We think people should take control of their community and workplace struggles, support each other, encourage practical solidarity, build the necessary skills and knowledge for these struggles and generate strong, permanent, grassroots networks.

Many of us are involved with local residents', community and campaigning groups within the borough. We support workers in dispute, campaigns against public service cuts and threatened community amenities. We are active on environmental, housing and claimants' issues and resist state controls.

Come and share your views at our monthly meeting. We welcome your involvement and with practical activities including distributing this newsletter and producing other materials including posters and leaflets.

For more about HSG, visit www.haringey.org.uk, befriend us on Facebook, follow us on Twitter @_hsg_, contact us at PO Box 2474, London N8, phone 0845 2235270 or email info@haringey.org.uk
